Northern and Southern Armies. George F. A ford, of Dallas, Texas, has written the fellowing letter to the editor of the Chicago Herald: "A correspondent in a recent issue of the Inter Ocean approunces the following as a bi-torical fact: "There were in the armies and navy of the United States during the war of rebellion of the Southern States 2 883 000, as shown on the rolls, and in Confederate armies, 1,652 000." In the interest of exact and impartial history, and with no desire to augment the glory of the southern soldiery with whose manly efforts to achieve separate nationality I was identified, I beg to correct the correspondent by stating—first, I believe it is now conceded by most intelligent and patriotic menthat it was not a war of rebellion, but a civil war between brothers—a family quarrel, which has been happily and forever adjudicated to the entire satisfaction of the soldiers on both sides, who fully respect the valor and conscientious motives of each other. Second, the entirements in tha federal armies were 2.750,000, and in the navy a sufficient number to swell the grand total to 3.000,000, the grandest army ever raised by any nation in any cause. The strength of the federal army at the close of the war in May, 1865, was 1,000,000, showing that nearly 2.000,000 men had been killed or placed hors du combat. The actual killed and died were 304,000. The pension rolls a quarter of a century star, the war is an actual form. separate nationality I was identified, I beg to correct the correspondent by stating— first, I believe it is now conceded by most intelligent and patriotic menthat it was not that nearly 2,000,000 men and been killed or placed hore du combat. The actual killed and died were 304,000. The pension rolls a quarter of a century after the war is over show nearly 1,000,000 wounded who still survive. Third, the total enlistments of the Confederate army from beginning to end of the gigantic struggie, instead of 1,652,000 as stated, were only 600,000, but never more than 400,000 were enrolled at any one time, while 200,000 were the most ever available at one time for active service. Of this number 100,000 were killed and died; 200,000 of the 600,000 enrolled were militia and home guards who never saw any active service. Brave union soldiers don't brag much of having with seven to one finally conquered their weaker brethren after a heroic struggie of more than four years. Only those do this who smelled no gunpowder and heard no bullets whistle. Charles A. Dana, As sistant Secretary of War during the great of first as these forces were compared.

HIS BREATH TOOK FIRE.-Twelve years ago, in the month, of Aug., 1877, a man met proprietor of the establishment where it occurred keeping the facts from the reporters for fear of burting his trade. They are about as follows: "James Harley, the victim, had just recovered from an attack of delirium tremens. He had been a regular sot, and was thoroughly soaked with alco-hol. His last attack of the "jim jams" was the third he had undergone within a few months. On the moraing in question he had started on another spres. At about 11 o'clock in the day he had about all the li quor on board he was able to carry. Step picg into a saloon on one of the principal streets, he called for a swig of "bug juice," which was promptly refused, the bartender noting the condition of the man, and re-Harley scowled, and turned to the gas-jet to light his pipe. A second later there was a drunken mean, a flash of alcoholic flame, and Harley fell heavily on the floor, his head and neck veiled in smoke, while blue jets of flame were issuing from his ears, mouth and noetrils. As soon as water could be procured (water is a commodity rather scarce around such places), it was dashed in scarce around such places), it was dashed in the sufferer's face, not in time, however, to save his life. The face was as black as that of a negro, the ears were charred, the inof a negro, the ears were charred, the inside of the mouth black, and the tongue
